HOW TO READ THE SCHEDULE

The course is divided into 4 themes related to the food chain, each with its own with meetings, readings and assignments.

The schedule shows when to attend IRT teaching slots (which will not be recorded):

- lectures with discussion time,
- seminars, and
- chat time slots for any questions or discussions you have to the themes.

The reading column shows 'when to read what' from the literature list. Please come prepared to the sessions!

Teachers: Helena Röcklinsberg (HR) and Per Sandin (PS).

In addition to the reading, you are asked to fulfil individual and group assignments, one per Theme. Detailed information about these assignments is available in Canvas.

ATTENDANCE DURING THE COURSE
Sessions marked with bold are mandatory. However, we recommend you to attend all sessions, since the the course is rather intense given the short time period and number of credits. For many students ethics is a relatively new discipline, yet the course is on masters level, and the studies requires both focus and time. Hence, if you have not studied ethics before, attendance during the first week (on ethical theories) is crucial to be able follow the subsequent teaching and assignments.
